PROHIBITORY LIQUOR LAW.

Salem, Oct. 19.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

It is safe to say that no subject will form so great a ... during the next few years, in the election of men to make laws in the United States, as that indicated at the head of this article. The present indications are that no power can stay the rapidly rising tide of public sentiment against intoxicating drinks, ... until every saloon in the nation is closed. Under such circumstances I have thought that it might interest the readers of The Oregonian to know that the legislative assembly of the provisional government of Oregon has the honor of having inaugurated the movement by passing the first law enacted on this continent prohibiting the introduction, sale and manufacture of ardent spirits. I have before me a copy of the Oregon archives, compiled by Hon. S. F. Green, as commissioner, from which it appears, on page 42, that Hon. John M. Burnett, now president of the bank of California, reported a bill from the judiciary committee, June 23, 1844, to prevent the introduction, sale and manufacture of ardent spirits in Oregon. On the 24th of the same month the bill was read a third time and passed.

Mr. Burnett afterward became the first governor of California. He lives in the enjoyment of a vigorous and honored old age, having seen a whole generation of mankind pass away since his head and heart conceived and his hand drafted a prohibitory liquor law which antedates every other movement of this kind on this continent. And now as he looks over the fields already white with harvest fruition, he may with honest pride exclaim, "This is my work."

THE COUNTY OF CROOK.

Some of its Citizens Demand that all the Officers be not Chosen from One Locality.

A meeting of voters of the eastern part of the new county was held last Thursday. Geo. Churchill was chosen chairman, and J. G. Turner secretary.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we, the voters of Mitchell precinct, extend our thanks to Hon. N. B. Eakin, Hon. L. F. Nichols and Hon. H. Dufur, for their faithful work as representatives of Wasco county.

Resolved, That we, the voters of eastern Crook county, disapprove of the action taken by the Prineville mass meeting, held on Saturday, Oct. 14, 1882.

Resolved, That it is not just to appoint all the officers from the same locality in any county.

Resolved, That our senator and representatives be instructed to use what influence they may see fit in regard to the appointment of officers in Crook county.

Resolved, That those officers should be appointed from various parts of the county and not entirely from one locality.

Resolved, That we respectfully ask his honor, the governor, to appoint what officers we may ask for the proposed new county of Crook.

The Daily Oregonian

MONDAY MORNING, OCT. 23, 1882.

RULE OF PARTY ACTION.

Our system of party action tends constantly to personal rule in politics. That is, the constant tendency is to make every political party, particularly when in the ascendant, a personal party. This is the origin of "bossism." The man who gets the control of a party into his hands is apt to use it to strengthen his own power. The history of both parties in Oregon furnishes instances enough to support this statement. Resistance to the system is the only recourse, if men would maintain any sort of opposition to party abuses supported by the rigors of party despotism. It is no mitigation of this despotism to say that, after all, it is only the rule of party; for the rule of a personal party—that is of a party controlled in the interest of a "boss" and his adherents—is only the rule of a despot. Nothing else can be made of it.

It is said by a thoughtful writer that the era of statesmanship began to decline when the spoils system was established; that managers succeeded leaders, and that wire-pullers climbed into positions which political thinkers, orators and philosophers had been called upon to fill. In every one of our states, though in some to a greater extent than in others, history fully bears out this statement. Combinations are made to control party "for all there is in it;" there is close alliance for possession and distribution of offices, contracts and whatever else may be made sources of profit and gain, attended with an energetic use of the party whip to reach the result. Party action, thus controlled, is degraded to the status and effort of an organized appetite for places and spoils. And then the citizen is told that he must not object to this low system of politics and party action, for if he does he will "ruin the party."

The mistake consists in regarding party as an end rather than a means. We are not to sustain party for its own sake, but for its use as an instrument to reach certain desirable ends. Party is a voluntary association of men united to promote the public interest upon certain lines upon which they are all agreed. Now there are politicians who make it their business to control the organization of parties by any means which they can command. All such are great sticklers for the doctrine that "regularity" in nominations is all that is needed to secure support. No member of the party is allowed to question the fitness of the candidate, of the methods he employs. He must simply vote "for the nominee." He has no right to an opinion whether a voluntary association, formed for certain ends, is carrying them out in a way to command respect, or not. The "nominee" claims his allegiance in the name of the party, and the voter is required to give up his right of conscientious judgment, to forfeit his individuality, and to admit that there can be no objection to candidate or platform which the regularity of convention or caucus cannot remove. Of course every man cannot have his own way. Some concession there must be. But as party is the result of voluntary association, each individual has a right, and it is his duty, to decide how far concession shall go and where it should cease. There can be no such thing as perpetual allegiance to a party, without inquiry as to its candidates, its methods, or its objects.

The health, vigor and usefulness of a party depend on the freedom with which its members criticise it, and their fearlessness to take independent action. Thus it is kept from departing from its true objects. And the thing most feared by the men who make a trade of politics, and who are constantly presenting the party with the narrow alternative of supporting them or defeating "the cause," is an independent vote, a vote cast deliberately and intelligently, for the purpose of bringing about a definite result, and not blindly for the party candidates without reference to results. If the measures and candidates of his party are acceptable to the citizen, then he should vote as party usages require; but if either are objectionable to him, and he can show good reasons for his objections, then it is his duty to make his objection felt. They are by no means the worst party men who take measures to check party abuses and to keep their party in the line of its approved objects.

THE EASTERN WATER WAY.

Nominally the Suez canal is under control of the French. Out of twenty-five directors of the company the English have but three. This appears unjust in view of the fact that the majority of the stock is owned by Englishmen, and that England furnishes four-fifths of the tonnage which passes through the canal. The English have recently demanded that their interests receive a more equable representation in the management, and recent news is to the effect that their wishes will be complied with by the French. It is difficult to see how it could well be otherwise. The French directors were plainly informed that unless they were reasonable the English would construct another canal for the exclusive use of English vessels. If this were done the Suez canal would lose four-fifths of its business and consequently the lion's share of its profits.

England's share in the management has been vastly less than the just proportion of her interests, and the French are polite enough to say that they see it. They know that England is able at any time to take exclusive control of the canal, just as she did do recently. The real situation will not be materially changed by giving England a greater share in the nominal directorship, the whole of which she virtually exercises now. The khedive is expected to make a great show of guaranteeing the neutrality of the canal, but he is owned by England, and knows well he dare not act independent of her wishes. The English also want the canal enlarged, and the French in this also will accede to their wishes.

—The ring papers are now saying that "the election of Mr. Dolph is no victory for The Oregonian." Of course it is not. The Oregonian was not contending for the election of any particular man. It does not believe in personal politics or a personal party. It was contending simply for fairness in politics and deliverance from bossism. As a triumph of these principles it accepts with satisfaction the election of Mr. Dolph. But of course it is not The Oregonian's victory. It is a victory of the people for principles essential to the peace and continued usefulness of the republican party. The interest which this journal has in politics is simply that of common citizenship; nothing more. This prerogative of common citizenship it intends never to surrender.

During the legislative session a Portland artist photographed the members of the legislature, and last Friday their pictures, arranged in a handsome frame, were exhibited in one of the corridors of the capitol. Each card was numbered, corresponding numbers in a key below standing opposite the names of the members. Doubtless the artist had no thought of perpetrating a sarcasm in the assignment of names and numbers, but still people smiled as they read "Truitt, 18."

London, with its 4,764,312 souls, is said to be practically without a government. If London knows when it is well off it will long continue in its present well-governed innocence of government. If, however, it wants to set up in the business, even so small a town as Portland could spare about one-half of its share of the article and enough tongues and rounders to run primaries in their interest.

The first of the "caucus members" who broke on the last day of the balloting was Moses of Clackamas. Very proper. It was for Moses to lead the boys out of the wilderness.

THE ASYLUM BILL.

The bill passed by the legislature providing for the government of the state insane asylum, creates a board of trustees composed of the governor, secretary of state and the state treasurer. The board shall hold property both real and personal in trust for the state and for the use of the asylum. They shall appoint all the officers of the asylum and regulate their duties. The act provides in detail that the board shall monthly meet at the seat of government, that they shall visit the asylum once in three months and keep themselves constantly informed of the asylum affairs, and fully report to the legislature every session. The board is authorized to appoint a medical superintendent, to serve during good behavior, and one or two assistant physicians, according to the requirements of the institution, each of whom shall hold office for four years or until his successor is appointed and qualified. The assistants are to be appointed by the board of trustees upon nomination by the medical superintendent. The salary of the superintendent is fixed at $2500 per year and that of the assistants at $1800 and $1500, and each of them and their families shall be furnished room, household furniture, provisions, fuel and light from the supplies of the asylum. All the physicians are required to be regular graduates in medicine and they must have practiced at least five years from the date of their diplomas. The superintendent is made the executive officer of the asylum. He is given authority to control patients, prescribe or direct their treatment, adopt sanitary measures for their welfare, and discharge such as, in his opinion, have permanently recovered their reason; to maintain discipline among the subordinate officers and employes, and enforce obedience to the laws, rules and regulations adopted for the government of the institution, and is empowered to discharge any employe or attendant for violation of the laws or rules of the asylum, and submit the same to the board of trustees at their last regular meeting preceding the meeting in May and November for their approval, and to estimate and report to the board of trustees the amount, kind and quality of furniture and household furnishing goods, provisions, fuel, forage, clothing and other material required for six months ending on the first day of August and February of each year. Provision is made in detail for the purchase of supplies, etc., and for the management of the asylum. The bill goes into effect whenever the public necessity requires it, after approval by the governor. "Public necessity" means when the new asylum building at Salem is completed. Four or five months will be required for this, and the trustees will take no action under the new law until the building is done.

THE NEWS IN THE EAST.

No political event of the year has attracted such wide interest as the senatorial struggle at Salem which ended Friday night, and no senatorial struggle in the whole history of the nation was ever more keenly watched. The present close vote of the United States senate gave the contest unusual importance as a partisan contest merely, while as a great trial of strength between the "independent" and "stalwart" divisions of the republican party it had greater interest. It was regarded as a fight in line with the pending struggles in New York and Pennsylvania, as the opening skirmish in a great party war, and the eyes of the nation were turned upon it. Its result had a value which we in Oregon, who were interested in its details, little considered. Interest on Friday in the leading cities was intense. The bulletins sent The Oregonian from the senate chamber were rushed through to eastern cities and were eagerly read by great crowds who waited about bulletin boards. At New York and Washington City after dark calcium lights reflecting the figures upon the boards were employed to note the changes, and as the contest approached the end great excitement prevailed.

PEACE AND GOOD WILL.

It is a relief to all that the senatorial struggle is over. In these contests feeling is often worked up to a high pitch; effort in a candidate's behalf increases the energy of his opponents, and the two forces act and react, till the contention becomes extreme. Then the struggle reaches a crisis; in a little time all is over, and when men stop to think, they wonder that they should have been so wrought up about such a matter.

This seems to be the present case. There has never been so bitter a contest in this state, as that which has just closed; nor has there ever been a result which, all things considered, could be called more satisfactory to all. It produces conciliation and restores good will; it will stop, once for all, a most acrimonious political contest. Already men who were engaged in it are turning their thoughts to other things, and all will feel relieved to know that we are clear of politics for two years to come.

The "salvation army" has reached San Francisco. Its headquarters are at the corner of Pacific and Battery streets, where nightly a great crowd is gathered. A few days ago the "army" began public operations in the streets, by marching in procession and singing religious songs. In its methods it imitates the London organization of the same name, which sprung up some years ago and has attained remarkable growth. It has spread from London throughout England, Scotland, and into India, and has planted itself in several cities on this continent. The organization attracts unusual attention from the fact that its members are regularly enlisted and subject themselves to absolute military discipline, and are all regularly uniformed, the men being required to wear the letter S stamped on the collar of their uniform and the women wearing a ribbon on their arm. The objects of the army are to prevent sectarianism and to preach the gospel to the poor, as it is claimed that more good can be done by remaining aloof from sectarian creeds, and also that the poor of the great cities are neglected by the pastors of the settled churches, both of which claims have some weight. High dignitaries of England are said to contribute to its support, and it has engaged the active attention of many of the best European writers and speakers. It bids fair to be the next sensation of the time.

Oregon has two new counties—Klamath, set off from Lake, and Crook, set off from Wasco. The bill to create Thurston county out of the eastern portion of Umatilla failed. It passed the senate, but was not reached by the house. But it would have passed the house, too, had not the time been taken up with the senatorial contest.

THE RECEPTION.

falling upon such a person, I think it must necessarily result in harm to the state and the party.

I apprehend that there is not a man in Multnomah county, or within the state of Oregon, who this day has any doubt that the state of Oregon will not only be honestly represented but fully represented by the Hon. J. N. Dolph. The honorable gentleman has been pleased to say to you that I was born in the same locality in the state of New York from which he came. I will say that is true, and I am proud to claim the fact. I am proud that it was my fortune to have been born and reared in the same county and state which has produced and created to the surface in the state of Oregon a representative man of the capacity of the Hon. J. N. Dolph, our next senator.

The result of course has been reached after a long and bitter contest. However long and bitter this contest has been, and it expressed as the minds of men I have met abroad in the state that it was impossible that a better result could have been reached than has been in the election of Hon. J. N. Dolph. I bid you good evening.

EX-ATTORNEY GENERAL W. H. WILLIAMS

Was next introduced and said he did not appear to-night to make a speech, but would say a few words. To be a senator in congress from a state in this union, a union containing fifty millions of free people, is to fill an office of great honor and responsibility. Governors of states, cabinet ministers and justices of the supreme court of the United States aspire to fill this office and in the estimation of public men it is next in dignity, honor and power to the office of president. When a contest for this great office is impending it is customary for candidates and their friends to appear and compete for the great prize. Such struggles are apt to beget asperities of feeling which seem for a time to threaten disorder and harmony of the republican party. Such an election has just occurred in this state under similar circumstances. No doubt the unsuccessful candidate and his friends feel somewhat sore and disappointed over the result, as has been the case in thousands of similar instances that have occurred in the history of the republican party, but time the "great healer of wounds," with their good judgment, may be depended upon to dissipate these feelings and to produce with them a feeling of friendship and satisfaction for the successful candidate as well as for the future success of the republican party.

Some of our friends suggested before the election, and some of them seem to think now that an election to the office of senator in congress without the nomination of a caucus is dangerous to the existence of the republican party, but while it may be a severe test of its recuperative power, it does not necessarily involve the integrity or the existence of the party. Since the republican party has existed it has passed through a great many perils and dangers; it has fought and lost a great many battles; it has encountered revolt and rebellion in its own ranks; it has espoused and advocated unpopular doctrines, but through all its trials and tribulations it has triumphed, not on account of its discipline, or its usages, but because it is organized upon the eternal principles of right and justice, principles of which it may be said, as has the poet said of truth, "The eternal years of God are theirs," while opposition, like "wounded error, dies amid its worshippers." I believe in the necessity of party organization, and I have always supported the nominees of republican conventions and caucuses, but it is a fact frequently occurring that all republicans will not support all nominations, and the reason is the republican party is largely made up of men with enlightened and independent minds who will think and act as they please and according to their individual convictions of duty and right. None of the friends of the defeated candidate for senator can be blamed, nor can they blame themselves because they were not successful, for I undertake to say that there has not been a contest for the office of senator in the United States where the friends of a candidate have been more determined and more zealous than were the friends of Mr. Mitchell in the contest which has just closed. I have nothing to say about what they did in that respect; but it is presumed, I believe, that men who have displayed such zeal and energy in supporting a man of their choice will show their good judgment and party fealty by acquiescing in a decision which it was impossible for them to prevent. They could not overcome or conquer impossibilities.

It often happens that in a contest of this kind a compromise is effected by which nobody is elected. I mean by that to say that somebody is elected who is so weak and so negative in his qualities as not to be useful or offensive to anybody, but this battle has been not resulted in that way. This battle has been gallantly fought out from the beginning to the end, and the result has been the election of a man with whom all of you are well acquainted. You all know that the senator-elect has the requisite qualifications to fill his high office with credit to himself, and advantage to this state. You know that he is a man of unblemished reputation, and a high sense of honor. You know that he is a man of industry, a man of energy and a man of ability. I have had some opportunity to know what qualifications are necessary to fill that office, and I know that he solid qualities of mind and character which this distinguished gentleman whom you are congratulating to-night, possesses, will enable him in the senate of the United States to reflect credit upon the state of Oregon, and essentially aid in promoting the peace, prosperity, and the best interests of the American republic. [Cheers.]

The night being chilly, the crowd were invited into the spacious parlors, where

EX-SENATOR CORBETT

Was introduced. He said: Fellow-citizens: I have but a few words to say to you to-night. We meet here for the purpose of congratulating our friend and fellow-citizen, Hon. J. N. Dolph, upon his election to the U. S. senate and to ratify that election. I join with you in hearty congratulations in this most important event in the history of our state—the election of a man of the character, standing and ability of our worthy candidate who has been elected. He will do credit to our state and will reflect honor on the nation. We have many important interests to legislate upon in this state, and we have chosen a man who, in my opinion, can represent us in everything with ability, energy and integrity. These qualifications are important and inspire confidence in the people and in the nation. It is necessary for us to send men to congress and to the senate who will not represent the true interests of this state. We have many and varied interests—agricultural, commercial, navigation and internal development—in this our great state.

It seems to some that capital and labor are antagonistic, but to us who have been some thirty years in Oregon, it would seem to unite the great elements that will develop and send our state forth to prosperity and prominence, which she most justly deserves. I trust that those who believe in this, that capital and labor should be united, will heartily endorse the election of Mr. Dolph.

It is thought by many that his being connected with important interests which are going to develop this state in so great a degree and send it forth with such rapid strides that these are antagonistic. They certainly are not. Mr. Dolph is a fair and honorable man; he will represent the great state and the people who sent him there, and look after her interests. The best interests of the state are united with these great enterprises, and in fostering these to such an extent as to develop our state will foster the interests of every citizen of the state. Therefore I say when he does this in an honorable manner, uniting the two great interests then we will feel the effect—will know the result. We are now entering upon an important era of development in this great state and great railroad interests from all portions of the country are now seeking our shores and to connect us with the great inland interests of the state and the Atlantic coast. It is important that these should be united in the nearest possible time; that they should be looked after and should be protected. The interests of this great people is to have the best development and the great interest of any of these corporations is to foster the interests of the people; to look to their interests from time to time and to take such just compensation as will pay them a fair interest on their investment. More than that they do not expect; but we must look to the interests of the people and see that they do not oppress them. I have the utmost confidence in Mr. Dolph that he will so adjust, so harmonize these as well as the interests of the great party which he represents.

In the election of Mr. Dolph we all cannot be satisfied, perhaps; others may have had their first choice; but for my part, he has been my choice from the commencement of this contest. I have known him long and well. He was a friend of mine when I needed a friend, perhaps I thought. When I was a candidate before the legislature, not at my own seeking, he voted and worked for the interests of the candidate whom he thought perhaps could be elected, and perhaps his first choice and took me as a second choice. I feel gratified in seeing him placed in this position. He has acted, in a liberal and a modest manner in the various contests in this state. He retired from the contest and allowed, if I may say it, Mr. Mitchell to be a candidate once before for the United States senate, and sacrificed his own interests that Mr. Mitchell might occupy the seat again. And, in the same manner, this time he sought not to prefer himself before another, but was willing that another should have the opportunity, until his friends thought it was time his name should be presented. But all is well that ends well. I congratulate you to-night on the result.

Hon. M. C. George then advanced and said: I desire to present to you your friend and my friend, and the friend of Hon. J. H. Mitchell. I present to you

HON. SOL. HIRSCH.

Mr. Hirsch said: Fellow citizens: I am here to-night to congratulate you upon the election of Hon. J. N. Dolph to the senate of the United States from the state of Oregon. I congratulate you upon the final termination of the most determined contest that has ever been made for a seat in the United States senate. I was elected to represent this county in the senate of this state as a republican, and as such deemed it my duty to abide by and conform to the time honored usages and customs of the republican party. In common with a great majority of the republican members of the legislature, went into a caucus that honorably and fairly nominated the Hon. J. H. Mitchell as the republican candidate for the United States senate. In obedience to that caucus, for thirty-one consecutive days, I cast my vote for its nominee, Hon. J. H. Mitchell, earnestly hoping that he might be elected. In the joint convention yesterday, which met at 12 o'clock noon, and continued without intermission until 10 o'clock at night, I continued to vote for Mr. Mitchell until I had cast 36 ballots for him, not only because it was Mr. Mitchell, but because he was the nominee of the party. I have always believed in organization. I have never believed that our party could be successful without organization. I always fully and submissively bow to the judgment of every convention and of every legislative caucus. I have always deemed it my duty so to do. I could not consistently claim to be a republican were I to act otherwise.

It was the duty of the legislature, having a republican majority of twenty in joint ballot, to elect a republican to the U. S. senate to succeed Hon. L. F. Grover. I had always determined that so far as it lay in my power this should be accomplished. After I had cast 36 ballots for Mr. Mitchell, only yesterday, the last day of the session, it became apparent to me that he could not be elected. I could not consent to permit the state of Oregon to be unrepresented in the senate of the United States, nor could I consent to permit the republican party to be deprived of that one vote in that body to which it was justly entitled. As you are all aware, the United States senate is, politically, about evenly divided, and the republican party of the state of Oregon could not afford to permit the legislature to adjourn without electing a senator. My love for the republican party would not permit me to consent that the legislature should adjourn without increasing the republican strength in the U. S. senate. I then commenced to vote for Mr. Dolph, believing that his election would be satisfactory to the great majority of the republicans in this state. I continued to vote for him, ballot after ballot, until he was elected, he having received on the last ballot 51 votes, or 4 more than necessary to elect him.

I have known Mr. Dolph for many years. I know him to be a true republican, a man of unblemished character, sterling integrity and of great ability. I have always considered him one of the foremost men of this state, and I know that he will be a credit to the senate of the United States, and will reflect honor upon the state which has elected him as a representative of Oregon in the highest council of the nation.

I believe that I have but reflected the sentiment of the people of this county in the course that I have pursued in this contest, and I believe my course will be approved. And now, fellow citizens, I congratulate you again, heartily and sincerely, on the election of Mr. Dolph.

Mr. John W. McBride was next introduced, and said: Fellow citizens: I regret, from personal reasons that my friend did not succeed. It is not with regret that you have all the people of the state. I believe he is one of the greatest of men, and I believe that for thirty days I supported the candidate who was, and I believe no man was ... disapproval of the result ... J. N. Dolph as ... I believe that the defeat of Mr. Mitchell has been averted by the election of a man who is a republican, and one of the ablest men in the state.

Reference to the long struggle which has attracted so much attention throughout the state, and to what all have felt as a drawback, I have to say, that as I was elected as a republican, I felt it my duty to secure the election of a United States senator. I entered into the contest as one of the friends of Mr. Mitchell and acted in concert with a large number of my party brethren for the purpose of securing a candidate for that position. I believe, I think as I believe now, that such a convention was one of the proper modes of obtaining an expression of the choice of the party, and that each member of a caucus is expected in that or any other manner, would be willing to give that degree of respect that would give to full and complete trial before an adjournment of the convention.

Although I voted at all times for Mr. Dolph, I recognized the necessity of ... who with others voted ... of all the republicans then as long as a majority of all the republicans believed that Mr. Mitchell should remain the candidate of the party.

I have always upheld the principles of the republican party and I believe that organization of any party is necessary to make those principles effective.

In the course of balloting to elect a senator, where the circumstances which determine the choice of a candidate may frequently change before an election is accomplished, change of opinion as to his availability or as to the expediency of further urging his election may be known as surely by the votes of the majority in joint convention, as by their votes in that formal meeting called a caucus.

At or thirty-two days of balloting it became evident to many of those who had given their votes for the nomination of Mr. Mitchell that his election was impossible, and feeling that their duty to their state, and to their party, was paramount to adherence to any tenet of party organization, they withdrew their support from him and presented the name of Mr. Dolph as one upon which all factions might unite.

Upon the sixtieth ballot he received twenty-nine votes, thereby becoming the candidate of the majority of all the republicans, and entitled to their support.

They little understand the temper, they underrated the patriotism of those who for so many days faithfully and honestly supported the majority candidate, who believed they would consent to an adjournment of the legislature without taking such action as would insure the election of a senator from this state.

To that end, for over four weeks they cast their votes for Mr. Mitchell, it being their opinion, based upon all the circumstances, that by such action there was greater probability of securing a republican to represent Oregon in the U. S. senate.

Further than that, during the exciting hours of yesterday's convention, when repeated attempts were made to adjourn without an election they voted unitedly against an act so dangerous to the future success of the republican party, and which in its results would have been so detrimental to the great interests of this state, which now, more than ever, require intelligent and able representation in the national congress.

As a result of those votes and of their subsequent action in presenting the name of Mr. Dolph they contributed to the election of a man whose character, ability and energy, give assurance of such legislation as will promote all the varied interests of the state.

I wish to add, that I am pleased to participate in this meeting, and I recall now the words of our senator elect in his address at the meeting called to ratify the nominations of the last republican state convention, when he said that he was "always ready to ratify, and could always stand upon the republican platform." It is cause for congratulation that instead of a failure to elect, which for a time seemed probable, we have chosen for senator a man who will reflect honor upon the state, and whose devotion to the best republican principles has always been disinterested and sincere.

LETTER FROM HON. W. LAIR HILL.

Hon. W. Lair Hill, having been requested by the friends of the senator elect to be present and to participate in the exercises of the evening, sent the following letter:

SALEM, Oct. 21.

Dear Sir:—I thank you for the compliment implied in the invitation to participate in the congratulatory exercises at Portland this evening. I regret exceedingly that I can not be at the meeting referred to. Please express my happiness at the result of the senatorial election. While I honor the steadfastness with which all parties pressed their respective causes, I rejoice that at last the members of a republican legislature would not allow their preferences to be carried to the length of preventing the election of a distinguished republican to the senate of the United States.

The senator elect possesses all the qualities necessary to make a worthy and an efficient representative of the state. He is a man of good habits, of sound morals and high social standing, of good abilities and great industry. No objections will be made to the action of the legislature in his election, excepting such as arise from extreme selfishness and the disappointment of small personal ambitions.

Yours truly,
W. LAIR HILL.

THE OUTLOOK FOR CATTLE.

In conversation with an extensive cattle dealer of eastern Oregon, Saturday, a representative of THE OREGONIAN learned that stock in Grant county and a portion of Baker is now in excellent condition. The blackleg caused great mortality among the young cattle of that range about a year ago, but there are no cases of it now. The range has been excellent during the entire season, and cattle, particularly those soon to be driven to market, are in unusually good order. Such dealers as Todd, Devine, French and Glenn, who operate chiefly in Grant and Baker counties, are realizing large profits from their extensive investments last spring, and are continually increasing their herds. They claim to have every assurance that the recent advance in the cattle market is permanent, and are convinced that eastern Oregon and Washington stock owners will reap a rich harvest from the range if the proper view is taken of the present condition of eastern and foreign markets. No fear need be entertained that the northwest frontier will be overstocked with cattle while the demand for beef is so great and the price continues at its present standard. The grazing lands of this state are also being well stocked with horses and mules of very fine grades. For the latter during the past year the market has been favorable and many extensive dealers are now devoting much of their time and attention to supplying the demand. The outlook on the principal ranges of the northwest are very satisfactory. The prevalent epidemic is just now only affecting the sections of Oregon and Washington that escaped its ravages last year.

State of New York Markets.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—General markets, with limited exceptions, are comparatively quiet for this period of the year, and the volume of trade falls to meet popular expectations. Nevertheless distributive movement holds up to quite large proportions and prices as a rule remain firm. Indeed, it is held by some authorities that the high prices of many commodities is a cause of the comparative sluggishness of current prices of commerce. Export trade in grain, provisions and petroleum is restricted for the same reason, but shipments of cotton are very large, and tonnage being scarce freight rates from supply ports have advanced. Otherwise the transatlantic freighting business is moderate and rates are weak. Money is in ample supply and available to prime mercantile borrowers and acceptances at 6 per cent., while sterling exchange has derived a degree of strength from cheaper money here and in London. Cotton has further declined. Wheat has ruled comparatively steady, while corn and oats have advanced. Flour is irregular. Lard and other hog products quieter. Petroleum is firm but quiet. The market for india rubber is unsettled. Manufacturers of rubber goods have resolved to shorten their production on account of the scarcity and high price. Spirits of turpentine is very scarce and the price has further advanced.

Common rosin is easier. Tobacco is quiet and steady. Domestic are lower and other foreign dried fruits steady. Hops are active and prices still tend upward. Raw sugars moderately active and firm, refined in moderate request at about steady prices. Molasses dull. Coffee quiet and steady. Tea dull at private sale but pressed through the auction room. Rice in fair demand and steady. Spices are dull. Pig iron is quiet. Tin is weak. Copper and lead are steady with but little doing. Drugs and chemicals a little more active and prices are more or less firm, quinine being among the exceptions. California product are inactive. Wool dull, but some inquiry for California is noted at lower prices, with sales of ... pounds at ... Beeswax is in good demand and still firmer. Quicksilver very quiet and steady at 37 cents. Mustard seed, dull. Hides, dull and prices firm. Crude, sperm and whale oils quiet and firm. Stocks of whale oil in first hands reduced to ... barrels, etc.

Eastern Freight Situation.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Quite a fair amount of business has been transacted to-day by vessels and ... for San Francisco, more the result of a ... during the storm of the past week than any new movement, for the market cannot be termed anything better than quiet. THE ALBINA HOMESTEAD is situated next to Albina, and between and fronting on both the extension of Fourth street, East Portland, and the Vancouver road. All the lots in Blocks 26, 27, 28, 29 and 30 are 50x120 feet, with twenty-foot alleys through the blocks. All the other lots are 50x100 feet. The streets are wide and have all been cleared, while the lots are high and level, and can be very easily cleared.

We now offer for sale for a short time a limited number of these Lots and Blocks, at reasonable prices and on easy terms.

THE ALBINA HOMESTEAD is unquestionably the best field for investment and the most desirable place for location now in the market. Its close proximity to the cities of Portland and East Portland, and to the heavy improvements now being carried out by the various companies under the direction of Mr. Villard—the Dry Docks, Elevators, Machine Shops and other works of these companies. Its nearness also to the Albina Ferry, together with the proposed Multnomah Railway from L street Ferry, in E. Portland, and from Albina, will make this property very accessable from all parts of these cities. These advantages will necessarily attract a large population, and in the meantime make this the most popular and valuable suburban property in this vicinity, while in the near future it must furnish homes for the rapidly increasing population of Albina, and then its value will be at least five times what we now offer it for. The property and full information given to all who may apply to
